Creating the working-groups

The theoretical group: Deepening understanding of the theoretical tools and constructs of psychodrama

The international research project group: preparing three research design projects and finding European Funds for implementing them

The train project group: Support groups of trainees for research in current training groups in different countries

The research active group: Gives active support to and collegial supervision to already started research projects

The evaluation group: Evolving an evaluation form to be tried out in primarily four different countries

On Sunday every group verbally and psychodramatically reported their work and conclusions

Jutta Fürst conducted a sociodrama where we choose the roles of patients, trainees, trainers, research tools or society representatives.

A sociodramatic group – the clients!

Kate Kirk conducted a drama where we walked in reality an fantasy from coming here to being here now and to render this process in a movement that the whole group repeated twice.

Gabriella Nicotra introduced a drama where everyone said what they had gained from the group and/or from individual participants and what they had given the group.

Gabriella Nicottra concluded the work shop with telling about Sicily and it history and nature.

See you all very soon!
